P R E F A C E,

THIS Book contains a short history of the Seminary, brief biographical sketches of the professors, a list of the trustees, and an alphabetical list of all the students that have attended the Seminary, from its organization at Greenville, S. C., in 1859, until the end of the session in 1889, at Louisville, Ky.

The particulars given respecting the students are :

1. The name of the student.
2. Place and date of birth.
3. College attended and degree obtained, if any.
4. Time in Seminary and the Schools graduated in.
5. Where and when ordained.
6. Honorary degrees received.
7. Institutions of learning that the student has been connected with.

8. Pastorates and other ministerial duties.

Notwithstanding the untiring efforts that have been made to get the necessary data to make the Catalogue complete, there are still many deficiencies. Let all notices of corrections and additions be sent to John R. Sampey, Louisville, Ky.

Much of the labor connected with the preparation of this Catalogue has been cheerfully performed by Rev. Jas. L. Sampey. Prof. A. T. Robertson has also given valuable assistance. The Author, however, assumes all responsibility for mistakes.

HISTORICAL SKETCH.

BY PRESIDENT JOHN A. BROADUS.

THE opening of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary was the result of a movement which began in 1845, when the Southern Baptist Convention was founded. A special conference of brethren held at that time led to various similar private discussions in the years that followed, and to a formal convention in April, 1856, at Augusta, Georgia. Several of the Baptist Colleges in the various Southern States had theological departments; but there was commonly only a single professor for this department, who had to teach all the subjects of the theological course; and in that year the largest number of students in any such department throughout the South was seven. Leading brethren in many Southern States were very anxious to establish a general Theological Seminary. They had no purpose nor desire to antagonize the various theological departments of the Colleges, and indeed believed that some of these would be strengthened by the new interest awakened in the general subject, as proved to be the case. But their wish was that such students for the ministry as desired it should have access to a full theological course, with several different professors, and with a large number of students from all parts of the South, who would stimulate each other to diligent and delighted study, and whose personal acquaintance and friendship would prove a valuable element in future denominational work. They also wished to adapt the methods of instruction in such a Seminary to those ideas of the ministry which have always prevailed among Baptists, and have been especially dominant in the Southern States.

These aims in regard to special adaptation to the Baptist ministry were rendered much more definite and decided by a remarkable inaugural address given in June, 1856, by James P. Boyce, who had already for a year been professor in the theological department of Furman University, at Greenville, South Carolina. The address was entitled, "Three Changes in Theological Institutions." It urged that existing theological seminaries had aimed almost exclusively at the regular training of a limited college-bred class of students, while the great mass of our most useful Baptist ministers had been, and must continue to be, men who had enjoyed no such extended and regular preparation. The first change he proposed was therefore that a theological institution should welcome to its instruction men who had only an ordinary English education, if they found it impracticable, or could not be induced, to take a previous college course. The second change was that the best qualified men should be more thoroughly trained, and carried over a wider range of scholarly study. The third change, that a certain "declaration of doctrine" should be set forth, and every person becoming theological professor should bind himself to teach in accordance with, and not contrary to, these doctrinal statements. But it was not at all proposed that this abstract of doctrine should be imposed upon the students, or in any authoritative way brought to their notice. Professor Boyce believed that the first and second changes could be carried out in the same institution.

In 1857 another educational convention was held in Louisville, Kentucky, in connection with the session of the Southern Baptist Convention. To this convention Professor Boyce brought a proposition from the State Convention of the Baptist denomination in South Carolina, that a general Theological Seminary should be established at Greenville, South Carolina, for which the South Carolina Baptists would contribute one hundred thousand dollars towards its endowment, upon condition that another hundred thousand should be raised elsewhere. This proposition was accepted by the educational convention at Louisville, and provision made for another special convention at Greenville, South Carolina, in April, 1858. At each of these three special educational conventions the president was B. Manly, D.D., father of the present Professor in the Seminary. Among the other older and widely known brethren who took a deep interest in the movement and did much to further it were J. B. Jeter, A. M. Poindexter, R. B. C. Howell, J. L. Burrows and J. B. Taylor, of Virginia; G. W. Samson, of Washington City; J. W.

M. Williams, of Baltimore; J. O. B. Dargan and R. Furman, of South Carolina; J. H. DeVotie, of Georgia; J. M. Pendleton, of Tennessee; S. L. Helm, of Kentucky. The lists of delegates at the several conventions also show the names of various younger men who have since become generally known; and several distinguished brethren attended one of the conventions, who could not go to them all.

When the Convention met at Greenville in 1858, Professor Boyce reported that he had raised the hundred thousand dollars from South Carolina in cash and good pledges, and plans were set on foot for raising the corresponding sum in other States. Through the labors of a committee which had been appointed at Louisville, the Greenville Convention was prepared to adopt a general Plan of Organization. The Fundamental Laws, which by the charter were to be made perpetual, include an excellent Abstract of Doctrinal Principles, to which every professor at his inauguration has subscribed. The Plan of Instruction was not placed among the fundamental regulations, and so admits of being altered; but it was as originally adopted almost exactly the same as to-day. The idea had been suggested that Professor Boyce's views, as set forth in his "Three Changes," could be carried into effect by dividing the usual range of study into a number of distinct "Schools," after the manner of the University of Virginia, which had become the most widely known and influential institution of learning in the Southern States, and had caused many to think favorably of the elective method, incorporated into that institution from the beginning by Mr. Jefferson.

When a Theological Seminary adopts a fixed curriculum, pre-supposing a College course, it must always be inconvenient to have numerous students who are destitute of College training, and do not propose to study the original Scriptures. With this difficult combination of elements our Baptist institutions have always struggled, making a variety of experiments, and with varying results. It was believed, at the foundation of this Seminary, that these difficulties would be largely overcome by adopting a thoroughly elective method; and it is proper to state that beyond the expectation of those who drew up the plan, this result has been accomplished. The teaching might of course have been much better done. But it has been clearly shown that men of the highest scholarship, pursuing as wide a range of theological study as can be found anywhere, and some of them adding a variety of special outlying studies, can by this thoroughly elective method live and work in the same institution with others who take the ordinary theological studies except the original Scriptures, and yet others who attend for only a single session, and study only what they are prepared for and desire. Some who enter as College graduates, but have really little knowledge of languages and little talent therefor, soon find it best to study only the English Scriptures, and the rest of the usual theological studies; some who came for only these English studies become fired with a desire to know the original Scriptures, and through extra work and added years go forth as good Biblical scholars. The elements move freely up and down, and in and out. The scholarly men are not in the least hindered in their special studies by the presence of many others in the same institution; while in the classes for the study of the English Scriptures, and several other classes, students of every variety of preparation sit side by side with far greater advantage than disadvantage.

The Seminary did not begin its operations in 1858, because two of the professors elected felt compelled to decline. The gifted and scholarly Dr. E. T. Winkler would have been a valuable addition to the Faculty. A year later one of those who had declined was led to reconsider, and Dr. William Williams was added. So in October, 1859, the Seminary went into operation with Professors James P. Boyce, John A. Broadus, B. Manly, Jr. and William Williams. Through the wise management of Dr. Boyce and the Board of Trustees no money was at the outset invested in buildings, the idea being to provide first the endowment necessary for the support of Professors before investing anything in buildings. At the Greenville Convention in 1858, Rev. William Curtis, D.D., of South Carolina, expressed his hearty approval of Professor Boyce's project in this respect, by a quaint phrase which has been often repeated. Dr. Curtis was an able and scholarly Englishman, said to have been associated with Coleridge the Poet, in editing the London Encyclopædia ; and was in 1858 conducting a Female Institute in South Carolina. What he said was nearly as follows : “The requisites for an institution of learning are three,—three B’s: Bricks, Books, Brains. Our brethren often begin at the wrong end of the three B’s. They spend all their money for bricks, have nothing for books, and must take such brains as come along. Our brethren ought to begin at the other end of the three B’s.” Dr. Boyce leased an unoccupied church, and by inexpensive partitions made it furnish two lecture-rooms and a library ; and these met the wants of the Seminary as long as it remained in Greenville. The students at first all boarded in families. After the war, a hotel which had been occupied by the military authorities was purchased and fitted up for a boarding hall, with the persuasion that it could be afterwards sold for more than it cost, as proved to be the fact.

The number of students the first session was twenty-six, being ten from Virginia, nine from South Carolina, three from North Carolina, two from Alabama, one from Florida, and one from Missouri. A good many other States were represented the second session, and the whole number of students was thirty-six: This was a far larger beginning than any other theological seminary in America of whatsoever denomination had enjoyed for its first two years. Meantime the second hundred thousand dollars had been secured in cash and good pledges from other States. The prospects of the seminary were exceedingly bright.

But before the end of the second session came the War. The number of students entering for a third session was much reduced, and during its progress several left to enter the army. At the close of this session in June 1862, it was thought best to suspend the work of the Seminary, an interruption which continued till the autumn of 1865. The professors were earnestly requested to continue their connection with the institution, and their salaries continued to be paid, in Confederate money, with the understanding that they would engage in such other pursuits as they deemed advisable, without resigning their professorships. Dr. Boyce was for some months chaplain to a Confederate regiment, and afterwards an active and influential member of the South Carolina Legislature. Drs. Manly and Williams established themselves as country pastors in Abbeville District, South Carolina. Dr. Broadus became pastor of country churches within reach of Greenville; in the summer of 1863 preached several months as missionary in General Lee's army, and afterwards to the end of the war was corresponding secretary of a Sunday-School Board, which the Southern Baptist Convention had established (at its meeting in Augusta, May, 1863), and located at Greenville, of which Board Dr. Manly was president.

When the war had closed, and the professors assembled in Greenville in the summer of 1865, it was a grave question whether the Seminary could venture to open its doors for another session. Much of the subscribed endowment had been paid during the war in Confederate money; the rest remained in bonds of planters, as good as gold before the war, but now practically worthless. The only available property was five thousand dollars in bonds of the Georgia Railroad, which could be sold for nearly par. Dr. Boyce volunteered to add a thousand dollars for a new session, though his own affairs had been of course greatly deranged by the war, and the financial future was utterly uncertain. Fortunately there was no debt, such as an opening attempt to erect buildings would have entailed. But there was very little hope that contributions could be obtained for current support from a people dwelling amid the widespread wreck of the war, those who had formerly been rich being now comparatively poor, everybody as it were beginning life anew, with an utter derangement of the industrial system, with no government but that of distant military officials and petty garrisons here and there, and with a tremendous social change for which history furnished no parallels and gave little encouragement or hope. Who could expect that a people thus situated would not only sustain their churches and local schools and one or more Colleges in every State—nearly all practically ruined as to their finances—but would also contribute for the support of this new institution, which had had no time to establish itself in the affections of the churches before the destroying flood? Yet it was properly enough suggested that the Seminary was in existence, and possessed something of prestige and promise ; and that if we abandoned it then, a whole generation must elapse, at the least, before any like effort would be made. Some one said, "The Seminary may die, but suppose it be understood that we'll die first." And very quietly this became the understanding.

For the first session, 1865-6, there were seven students in all ; but every subject that any one of them wished to study was regularly taught. The professor of Homiletics, it is remembered, gave a pretty full course of instruction and entirely in the form of lectures to one student, who was blind. We were working for the future ; and by God's merciful blessing the future came. The number of students slowly increased every year, till in our last session at Greenville, 1876-7, it reached sixty-five, perhaps one or two more. As to the finances there was a long period of struggle and suffering, darkened by the frequently recurring fear of ultimate failure. At one time the salaries were a whole year in arrears, with no certainty that they could ever be paid. Several of the professors made long trips to serve country churches, frequently bringing back part of their compensation in food for the family. But many of the students had passed through the stern school of war ; and even where they were lacking in literary attainment and exact knowledge, they were often true men, full of noble impulses and kindling aspirations, and it was delightful to teach them, to supplement their various deficiencies and sympathize with their higher aims. There was also great encouragement in the generous contributions made by churches and individuals in different parts of the Southern country. People who could not calculate with any great confidence upon meeting the wants of their own households for the coming year were often willing to help the Seminary. Men who were just becoming well started in business, and who had a right to value every dollar for what they might hope to make out of it in the years to come, often gave and sometimes largely. Dr. Boyce made perpetual and unceasingly diligent exertions, by correspondence and by personal application. About five years after the war, some generous Baptists at the North began to give aid, at first for the personal expenses of students, and afterwards for the current support of the professors. As the South revived, Dr. Boyce was able twice over to organize a general subscription of so much a year for five years, to meet the current expenses. But when this had a second time been secured, and it became evident that efforts must be made to obtain a permanent endowment, the conclusion was slowly and reluctantly reached that it would be necessary to remove the Seminary to some other point in the South. The State feeling was in all cases so strong that we could not hope to obtain any large general contribution for endowment, unless half or more than half could be drawn from the State in which the Seminary was situated, as had been the case at its foundation. In South Carolina this was not now possible; or at any rate the effort to secure it would have hopelessly interfered with similar efforts then pressingly needed in behalf of Furman University.

For several years the question of removal was earnestly considered; and propositions were made by friends in several Southern cities. It was finally decided to remove to Louisville, Kentucky, where Dr. Boyce had already been residing for several years, devoting himself to the work of endowment. The necessity of removal was a grief to all the professors, especially to Dr. Boyce, who was leaving the State he loved so well. It was accepted by the South Carolina brethren only after long consideration, but at length with that chivalrous generosity which characterizes the Carolina people. The brethren in Kentucky gradually rose to the occasion in a very remarkable manner, their personal pledges at length reaching the sum of three hundred thousand dollars, out of the half a million that it was thought would be needed for endowment and buildings. So in the autumn of 1877 the Seminary was removed to Louisville. The number of students increased somewhat the first year, and has gone on increasing till it has reached 164. A considerable part of the endowment subscribed in Kentucky and elsewhere not having been collected, and the expenses being necessarily increased by removal to a large city, the income from endowment has never sufficed to support the institution; and several years after the removal there was serious danger that after all it might perish. But a new movement was begun by an extraordinary and unexpected gift from Hon. Joseph E. Brown, of Georgia, seconded by various friends in Louisville, New York City and elsewhere, which at length gave a permanent endowment such as to furnish assurance that the institution could not perish; and at this writing it is hoped that the income will within another year become sufficient to meet the expenses of the Seminary as at present organized. It is hoped that thoughtful friends will continue to make special contributions and bequests such as to meet the ever-growing needs of a rapidly-growing institution.

A part of the existing endowment consists of fifteen thousand dollars bequeathed by D. A. Chenault, Esq., and ten thousand bequeathed by W. F. Norton, Esq., the income from which is applied to aid such students as need it in paying their board. Ever since 1867 annual collections have been made for this purpose by one or another of the professors, and such collections have to be still made on a large scale, in addition to the income from the fund.

The same policy as to buildings which had proved so wise and fortunate in Greenville was pursued in Louisville also, rooms being rented for the lectures and library, and a hotel rented as a home for the students. In the spring of 1886 an extraordinary contribution was made by generous friends in New York City and vicinity for the erection of a seminary building, which is known as

New York Hall, about an equal amount having been given by friends in Louisville to pay for the centrally located and admirable grounds on which it is situated, and which will afford space for other important buildings in the future. A separate and beautiful library building is in process of erection as the gift of Mrs. J. Lawrence Smith, of Louisville. Two families from among the seminary's most generous friends in the city have promised a large sum to erect a hall for lecture-rooms, etc., so soon as the general endowment reaches a certain necessary figure. The continued increase in the number of students will not probably for several years surpass the capacity of New York Hall as a dormitory, and when another such hall shall become necessary, the ground is waiting to give it a front upon one of the noblest streets in the city.

The theological library of Furman University, South Carolina, was transferred to the Seminary, and some valuable works from the library of Columbian College (now University) in Washington City. Important bequests of books were made by Prof. W. E. Bailey of South Carolina, Rev. B. Manly, Sr., and others, and purchases were effected every session, so far as the financial situation would allow, of carefully selected works in the various departments of theological inquiry. The late President, Dr. Boyce, bequeathed all the theological portion of his noble collection, and the library of the Seminary now comprises about fifteen thousand volumes.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

JAMES P. BOYCE, D.D., LL.D.

BY WILLIAM H. WHITSITT, D.D., LL.D.

On the third day of last October, it was thirty years since the Seminary commenced operations at Greenville, S. C. Counting the instructors in elocution, twelve persons have been regularly connected with its teaching force. Of that number three have died, each of them being in office at the time of his decease. Prof. Williams passed away on the 20th of February, 1877, Prof. Riggan on the 18th of April, 1885, and President Boyce on the 28th of December, 1888. He had been in service continuously in connection with the chair he occupied in the Seminary since the month of May, 1858, although various circumstances prevented the work of instruction from being inaugurated till October, 1859. More than thirty years were filled with untiring exertions and sacrifices on the behalf of the enterprise that lay so near his heart. James Petigru Boyce was born at Charleston, S. C., on the 11th of January, 1827, and lacked only a few days of closing the sixty-second year of his age. His youth and early manhood covered the golden age of Southern prosperity. His family stood with the best of his native city and State, and there were none whose social connections were more eminent or desirable. His mother was a sister of Hon. Jos. Johnston, of the Supreme Bench of South Carolina. His father, the Hon. Kerr Boyce, was one of the most successful and influential men of business, well known in all sections of Carolina and of the Southern country. At the time of his birth, Mr. James Petigru, one of the leading lawyers of the country, was in the fullness of his powers and his triumphs at Charleston. The relations between Kerr Boyce and the great jurist were of an intimate and endearing nature, and Mr. Petigru received the compliment of having the oldest son of his friend and business associate named in his honor. It was one of the best names on the annals of recent Carolina history, and it has been worthily borne by the namesake through all these three-score years.

The educational opportunities of Dr. Boyce were of the highest order. His earliest mental training was received at Charleston College, where he studied from 1843 to 1845. After finishing his course there, the young man next resorted to Brown University, which was then the foremost Baptist seat of learning in America. Dr. Francis Wayland was its renowned president, the fame of whose learning and character was well established both in the North and South. His graduation at Brown occurred in the summer of 1847, just after he had turned the 20th year of his age.

Dr. Boyce was early a subject of profound and lasting religious impressions. His mother was a devoted member of the First Baptist Church of Charleston, and in early childhood he was brought under the influence of one of the most remarkable of the men who have served as pastors of that historic organization. The year after his birth Dr. Basil Manly, Sr., entered upon the duties of the pastorate, and was the first Christian minister that Dr. Boyce became acquainted with. Christian life among the Baptist people of Charleston in those days was a different thing from what we are now accustomed to, and his plastic mind readily yielded to the influences that were cast about him. The impress of Dr. Manly and of the sentiments that prevailed in the First Church were visible upon Dr. Boyce till the close of his life. The year before his graduation he received baptism at the hands of Dr. Richard Fuller, at that time pastor of the church at Beaufort, who was conducting a series of meetings in Charleston. It may be perceived at a glance that his youthful history was connected with the best names in recent Baptist annals: Manly, Brantly, Wayland and Fuller were leaders of the hosts in both sections of the country. There could have been no more favorable auspices, or more desirable influences.

Having decided to devote his life to the Christian ministry, he was licensed by the First Church shortly after his return from Brown University. His powers were so highly esteemed that the next year he was appointed to be editor of the Southern Baptist, a journal that was issued in connection with the Southern Baptist Publication Society, which had its seat in Charleston. Retaining that office for more than a year, he at length concluded to pursue his theological studies at Princeton, then, as now, one of the leading theological schools of the country. At the end of two years he quitted Princeton and entered upon the pastorate at Columbia, the capital of his native State. His period at Columbia, which lasted from 1851 to 1855, was one of extensive usefulness and marked success. It was given to his exertions to make a decided advance by building a new house of worship, a large portion of the expense being contributed from his own resources.

In 1855 the position of Professor of Theology at Furman University was offered to him, and he considered it was his duty to accept it. Furman University has had a lengthy and worthy record, but it never had a name connected with it that sheds more lustre upon it. Dr. Boyce signalized his entrance upon the labors of the new office by delivering an introductory lecture entitled "Three Changes in Theological Education," which, for the results that followed it, has become a famous performance. The principles laid down there were a few years later embraced in the plan upon which was constructed the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary.

The project of organizing a Theological Seminary for the entire South had been discussed for a number of years: it was brought forward upon the organization of the Southern Baptist Convention in August, 1845, and from time to time had received a measure of attention at different sessions of that body. Finally in 1855, just before Dr. Boyce removed to Greenville, an Educational Convention was called by the Convention in session at Montgomery, Ala., to assemble at Augusta in 1856, for the purpose of consultation. No definite plan was concerted, and another Educational Convention was called to assemble at the session of the Convention in 1857 with the Walnut Street Church of Louisville. Meanwhile Dr. Boyce had induced the brethren of the South Carolina Baptist Convention to offer one hundred thousand dollars towards the endowment of a Seminary, provided the other Southern States would raise a like amount; and further provided that the institution should be established at Greenville, South Carolina. This offer was accepted on condition that the money should be raised by the 1st of May, 1858. A third Educational Convention was called to meet in Greenville on the 30th of April, 1858, where Dr. Boyce was able to report that the proposed condition had been fulfilled.

The Convention then proceeded to arrange fundamental laws for the government of the new enterprise, and to select a faculty of instruction. Certain members of the proposed faculty declining the positions offered them, it was impossible to begin work in the autumn of 1858, and the matter had to be deferred another year. Only three sessions were completed before the war rendered it impracticable to proceed. From the 1st of June, 1862, until the 2d of October, 1865, the Seminary was closed. Much worse than the disaster of closing the doors was the other disaster of losing the endowment. Nearly all of the available funds were swept away. It was a gloomy time on the 2d of October, 1865, when the work was begun anew with almost no resources and almost no students. Few people are acquainted with the anxieties, trials and labors that pressed upon Dr. Boyce for a long course of years after the war. It was finally made apparent that the enterprise could not be permanently sustained in Greenville, and a decision was reached to remove it to Louisville.

Dr. Boyce came to Kentucky in 1872 to prepare the way for it; but in 1873 the financial panic took place, which for a season placed everything in jeopardy. After herculean toils, that peril was surmounted, but in 1879 the institution was again in straits that were as serious perhaps as any that it had ever encountered. In the nick of time, Senator Joseph E. Brown came forward with a contribution of fifty thousand dollars and rescued it from threatened extinction.

Two years before his death, it began to be observed that Dr. Boyce's health was failing. At a meeting of the Board of Trustees in May, 1886, arrangements were made by which he might obtain partial relief, but it came too late; nothing could allay the symptoms that now began to exhibit themselves. His decline was watched with affectionate solicitude by multitudes of people in all sections of the country. Finally he resolved to seek rest and recuperation in foreign travel, and in August, 1888, he embarked with his family on a journey to Europe. At first there were hopeful tidings, but at length there came a change. We waited with the utmost anxiety for every fresh item of information, until, on the morning of December 28th, in the midst of universal sorrow, the dreadful message was delivered informing us we should see his face no more.

Dr. Boyce has received exceptional honors during his long and laborious life from all sorts of people. The Baptists, for whom he toiled so faithfully, were always delighted to show their appreciation. He was annually elected to the highest office in their gift, the Presidency of the Southern Baptist Convention, from 1872 to 1879. Again in 1888 he was elevated to the same dignity, and died in possession of it. In May, 1888, the office of President of the Seminary was created and bestowed upon him. He received the honorary title of D.D. in 1859 from Columbian University of Washington, D. C. ; in 1872 the degree of LL.D. was conferred by Union University, Murfreesboro', Tenn., and again in 1887 by Brown University. When the Slater Fund Commission was organized a few years ago, by the express desire of the founder, he was appointed one of its directors for the South.

During the war between the States, although he had been opposed to the secession of South Carolina, he entered the army and served for a year as Chaplain of the Sixteenth Regiment of South Carolina Volunteers ; from 1862 to 1865 he was a member of the Legislature of South Carolina, and for the last two years of that period was a member of the staff of Gov. McGrath, and of the council of State. At the close of the war, in 1865, he was also a member of the Convention that was assembled for the reconstruction of the State.

In his family he was exceptionally fortunate. Early in life, perhaps during his residence at Princeton, he married Miss Elizabeth Ficklin, of Washington, Georgia. She was a faithful helpmeet through the years of his manhood and struggle, and survives to mourn her irreparable loss. There are three daughters, Misses Lizzie, Fanny and Lucy—all of whom, with their mother, accompanied him to Europe, and were present to comfort his parting moments. The town of Pau, in the Pyrenees, will evermore have a mournful interest for them and for thousands of others who revered and loved the noble husband and father.

Dr. Boyce was the author of a number of addresses, sermons, review and newspaper articles. He likewise published a brief catechism of Bible doctrine at Greenville in 1863, of which the last edition appeared at Louisville in 1884. His chief literary performance was his Abstract of Theology, which was first issued for the use of his classes, but was revised and formally published in the summer of 1887. It is used as a class-book in the Seminary, and has been widely read by Baptist and other scholars.

One of the noblest leaders of Southern Baptists has fallen. He easily takes a place in the galaxy where shine Furman, Fuller, Manly, Poindexter, Jeter and Taylor. A sturdy, honest, godly man; an elevated and genial character; a safe and wise counselor; who can tell all we have lost in our departed friend and President!

JOHN ALBERT BROADUS, D.D., LL.D.

Born in Culpeper County, Va., January 24, 1827. His father was for a number of years a prominent member of the Virginia Legislature. Dr. Broadus took, in 1850, the degree of A.M. from the University of Virginia—a degree which he prizes more highly than all the honorary titles which have been subsequently conferred upon him. In 1851 he became Assistant Professor of Latin and Greek at his Alma Mater, holding this position for two years. He was pastor of the Baptist Church in Charlottesville from 1851 till 1855, when he became chaplain of the University, and served two years. From 1857 to 1859 he was for a second time pastor at Charlottesville. Dr. Broadus was elected to a professorship in the Seminary in 1859. He has been wedded to the institution ever since, having frequently declined tempting offers to preach and teach elsewhere. Dr. Broadus teaches Homiletics and the interpretation of the New Testament in Greek and in English. He also organizes special classes for the study of Patristic Greek, Textual Criticism of the New Testament, Foreign Hymnology, Coptic, Modern Greek, etc.

In 1863 Dr. Broadus did evangelistic work in Lee's army. During the last two years of the war he was corresponding secretary of the Sunday-School Board of the Southern Baptist Convention.

Dr. Broadus has written extensively for religious newspapers and reviews. His larger treatises include a "Commentary on Matthew," "Sermons and Addresses," "Preparation and Delivery of Sermons," "History of Preaching," and "Jesus of Nazareth." Among numerous smaller treatises we may name, "Three Questions as to the Bible," "Authority of the Bible," "Duty of Baptists," "Christian Baptism," "Should Women Speak in Mixed Public Assemblies?"

Born in Edgefield District, S. C., December 19, 1825. In his boyhood Dr. Manly attended a preparatory school in Charleston, S. C., and was graduated at the Alabama State University in 1843. He studied for a while at Newton Theological Institution, but graduated at Princeton Theological Seminary in 1847. He was ordained at Tuscaloosa, Ala., in January, 1848. After preaching for nearly three years to churches in Alabama, he accepted a call in September, 1850, to the First Baptist Church, Richmond, Va. In 1854 he founded the Richmond Female Institute, and was its first president. Dr. Manly became one of the original professors of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in 1859. In 1871 he was elected to the presidency of Georgetown College, Ky. He held this position until 1879, when he returned to the Seminary to occupy the chair of Old Testament Interpretation and Biblical Introduction. He teaches classes in English Old Testament, Senior Hebrew and Biblical Introduction. He also teaches Assyrian and Aramaic, whenever a sufficient number of students wish to work in these languages. For many years Dr. Manly was treasurer of the fund to aid needy students, which was raised annually by the personal efforts of Professors Manly and Broadus.

In addition to the publication of several addresses, Dr. Manly has given to the religious world a carefully prepared treatise on the "Bible Doctrine of Inspiration." He has also issued two hymn-books, one in 1850, in connection with his father, Dr. Manly, Sr., "The Baptist Psalmody," which obtained an extensive circulation; the other, "Baptist Chorals," a smaller book published in 1857.

WILLIAM WILLIAMS, D.D., LL.D.

BY BASIL MANLY, D.D., LL.D.

The Rev. William Williams, one of the original faculty of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, was born in Eatonton, Georgia, March 15, 1821. His parents, William and Rebecca Williams, had ample means and gave him every advantage of education. At an early age he joined the Baptist Church at Athens, Ga., in 1837. Attending the State University of Georgia, he graduated there in 1840, and decided to devote himself to the study and practice of the law. In pursuance of this plan, after marrying Miss Ruth Bell, August 26, 1845, he finally went to Harvard University, where he graduated in Law in 1847. His mind had meanwhile been turned to the question whether he ought not to preach; and the conviction of duty grew upon him until, in 1857, his decision was reached and he entered the ministry, his first pastorate being at Auburn, Ala. The severe discipline and training which his mind had received during the prosecution of his legal studies left their impress upon his style and his character. He was always remarkable for his skill in discovering and exhibiting clearly the salient points of every question he discussed, for grasping the details so as to sum them up in a comprehensive unity and making his conclusion so clear that the listener could hardly help believing that that was exactly the way he had always thought and felt upon the subject in hand.

From a quiet and successful pastorate he was summoned, in 1856, to become Professor of Theology at Mercer University; and in 1859, when the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary was established at Greenville, S. C., he was made Professor of Ecclesiastical History and Church Government and Pastoral Duties. In the year 1872, owing to the necessary absence of Dr. James P. Boyce in endeavoring to make an endowment in Kentucky, he was transferred to the chair of Systematic Theology, which had originally been assigned to Dr. Boyce, and this he filled with great energy and acceptance till the time of his death. He was for a time Vice-President of the Southern Baptist Convention, and delivered its annual sermon at St. Louis in 1871.

His modesty prevented his taking as prominent a part in the counsels of his brethren and in various public activities as his abilities would have justified, and as the esteem in which he was held by those who knew him would have sanctioned. He preferred retirement, but whenever summoned forth proved himself equal to the occasion. A warm friend, a fervid and vigorous preacher, a teacher of singular clearness and attractiveness, a Christian of deep and simple piety, he served his generation by the will of God. He fell asleep at Aiken, S. C., February 20, 1877, and was buried at Greenville, where a monument erected by his loving students marks his grave.

CRAWFORD H. TOY, D.D., LL.D.

This distinguished scholar was born in Norfolk, Va., March 23, 1836. Dr. Toy received his early training at Norfolk Academy, and studied four years at the University of Virginia, taking the degree of A.M. in June, 1856. In 1859 he attended the Seminary, remaining one session, after which he entered the Confederate Army as a private and became a chaplain in 1863; but was taken prisoner and confined for several months at Fort McHenry. He was elected Professor of Old Testament Interpretation in the Seminary in 1869, which position he held for ten years, resigning in 1879. He is now Professor of the Semitic Languages in Harvard University.

WILLIAM HETH WHITSITT, D.D., LL.D.

Prof. Whitsitt was born near Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 25, 1841. He graduated in Union University in 1861. He entered the cavalry service in the Confederate Army during the first year of the war, serving first as a private soldier and afterwards as chaplain. In 1866 he entered the University of Virginia for one session. He came to the Seminary at Greenville in 1867, and remained two sessions. This course was followed by a residence of two years in Germany, where he pursued his studies at Leipsic and Berlin. In February, 1872, he accepted a call to Albany, Ga. In September, 1872, he accepted the Professorship of Ecclesiastical History and Biblical Introduction in the Seminary. He still retains the chair of Church History, but has exchanged Biblical Introduction for Polemic Theology.

In 1888 Prof. Whitsitt published a small volume on the "Origin of the Disciples of Christ." He has in manuscript a large work on "Mormonism," which may be published at some future time.

Born in Isle of Wight County, Va., February 22, 1855. He spent his early youth living with his widowed mother near Norfolk, Va. He received his early training in the public schools of Virginia. At the age of seventeen he attended the school of Rev. J. W. Ward for ten months, where he won marked distinction. After this he entered Richmond College, and at the end of five years of hard study graduated with the degree of Master of Arts. He took the full course in the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary from 1878 to 1881. Dr. Riggan was ordained at Leigh Street Baptist Church in Richmond, Va., in October, 1875, and preached to churches near Richmond while attending college. During his seminary course he was pastor of Carlisle Church in Kentucky. He was the beloved pastor of Forks of Elkhorn Church, in Woodford County, Ky., about five years. The members of the church were devoted to him, especially a distinguished physician, who left his practice and remained at his bedside with untiring devotion to the end.

Dr. Riggan was elected assistant instructor of Hebrew, Greek and Homiletics in the Seminary in 1881, and after two years was made Assistant Professor, which position he held at the time of his death. He was happily married to Miss Sallie Garland in June, 1882.

Dr. Riggan possessed an acute and powerful intellect, but his physical strength was not sufficient to bear up under such heavy burdens as were imposed upon it; consequently he was frequently ill during his college and seminary course. He preached his last sermon at night in Glenview Chapel, near Louisville, Ky. Riding home with his garments all wet with perspiration, he was taken sick, and confined to his bed about two weeks. He died April 18, 1885, aged thirty years, one month and twenty-six days. We close with a brief quotation from the funeral sermon by Dr. Broadus: "We cannot but regret that this bright and inspiring example of what ambitious youth may hope to achieve amid difficulties, should be dimmed by so early a death. Yet far better even thus than to have lived inglorious, undeveloped, inefficient, through many years. Better to blaze and flame and set things on fire through a little time, than to smoulder long without power to warm or illumine, and then die unnoticed and unknown."

FRANKLIN HOWARD KERFOOT, D.D.

Born in Clarke Co., Va., Aug. 29th, 1847. He received his early education at schools in Berryville. Though quite young, he entered the Confederate service before the close of the war. In 1866 he entered Columbian University, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Philosophy, and in 1869 he took the degree of Bachelor of Law. He studied in the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary for a year and a half, when, his health failing, he was compelled to rest for nearly a year. In 1871

he entered Crozer Theological Seminary, and after one session's work graduated. For some time he traveled in Europe, Egypt and Palestine, and studied one year at the University of Leipsic. On his return to the United States he became pastor of Midway and Forks of Elkhorn Churches in Kentucky, Feb. 1, 1875. In 1877 he became pastor of Eutaw Place Baptist Church, Baltimore, Md., continuing until 1883, when he accepted the pastoral care of Strong Place Church, Brooklyn, N. Y. He became crippled in 1886, and resigned. He re-entered the Seminary in 1886, and attended one session. Dr. Kerfoot was elected Co-Professor of Systematic Theology in the Seminary in 1887, and full Professor of Systematic Theology, Pastoral Duties and Church Government in 1889, which position he now holds.

Son of Rev. James L. Sampey, was born in Lowndes County, Ala., near Fort Deposit, on the 27th day of Sept., 1863. His early training was at Ramer High School in Montgomery County, Ala. At the age of sixteen he entered Howard College at Marion, Ala., from which he graduated with the first honors of his class in 1882, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He entered the Seminary in 1882 and was made a full graduate in 1885. He was ordained at Forks of Elkhorn Church, Woodford Co., Ky., Sept. 27, 1885, and became pastor of that church, preaching two Sundays in each month. In September, 1889, he accepted the care of Glen's Creek Church for two Sundays in each month. On the death of the lamented Dr. Riggan, in 1885, Mr. Sampey was elected assistant instructor in Hebrew, Greek and Homiletics in the Seminary, and after two years was made Assistant Professor. He teaches classes in Junior Hebrew and assists in Homiletics. He also teaches Arabic when a sufficient number desire to study that language.

ARCHIBALD THOMAS ROBERTSON, A.M.

Born near Chatham, Pittsylvania Co., Va., November 6, 1863. When he was twelve years of age his father, Dr. John Robertson, moved to North Carolina. At the age of sixteen he entered Wake Forest College, N. C., to prepare himself for the ministry and graduated in June, 1885, with the degree of Master of Arts. He was missionary in Liberty Association, N. C., during the summer of 1885. He entered the Seminary in October, 1885, and became a full graduate in 1888, taking diplomas in seven extra classes. He supplied, while a student at the Seminary, Hendersonville Church, N. C., in the summer of 1886, and the First Church at Covington, Ky., from March to October, 1887. Professor Robertson was ordained at New Castle, Ky., in July, 1888, and served the church at that place as pastor from June 1, 1888 to January 1, 1889. He supplied Ninth Street Church, Cincinnati, O., from March 9 to June 8, 1890. He was elected assistant instructor of Greek and Homiletics in the Seminary in 1888, and after two years was appointed Assistant Professor. Professor Robertson teaches classes in Junior Greek and assists in Homiletics. *
